Here is the code below. I want to connect a graph to another graph. The top graph just reads from a file and the second reads from a graph that is made based on the contents of a file. Note, the file that is read into the 2nd graph has the same structure as the graph that is being created here. The code produces a compile error, and I do not understand why as I think it matches up exactly to the syntax that I have written below. import pyspark.graphx as graphx def run_top(): top_df = spark.read.text("hdfs://localhost:9000/gsax-imperative.csv") top_graph = graphx.Graph() top_graph.addVertex(top_df.id) top_graph.addVertex(top_df.id_place) return top_graph def run_bottom(): bottom_df = spark.read.text("hdfs://localhost:9000/gsax

In this case, the aggregate score is 0-0, and thus, a tie is established. As there are no away goals, no extra time is played. The final result is the same as the aggregate score (which is 1-1). 28 April 2019 – 2015 FIFA Women's World Cup (Brazil 2015) – Final (Gol de Vinício) – Women's tournament final live from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. (80 minutes) Result: 2-2 (1-1) Brazil wins the Women's World Cup for the first time. [Updated 2 June 2019] Game summary During the match, Karina Marques celebrates after scoring for Brazil. The match ends with the goal scored by Vinícius (Brazil) at the hour mark (vs. Italy) Brazil 1–2 Italy (Karina Marques 77′) Italy plays an excellent game, but in a poor end, they are not able to score against the powerful Brazil defense. There is a large gap between Brazil and the first Italian goal, which is only a penalty kick, and the goal is late from Fabiana Silva, which is not enough to make the difference. In the end, Brazil held on to win 1-2. The Brazil squad is shown celebrating the victory on the field of play. Brazil's victory allows them to be crowned as the 2015 FIFA Women's World Cup winners. Record Brazil did not lose a single match at the tournament. They won all five group stage matches they played. Brazil also faced the defending champion, the United States, in the knockout stage, but ended up as a winner, as the United States withdrew from the competition in the final group stage match. By advancing to the knockout stage and winning the tournament, Brazil became the second women's soccer team to win the World Cup, after the United States in 1991. Additionally, the win was their first major international title. Stadia and locations Brazil played the majority of its home matches in Fortaleza, São Paulo, and Brasília. They won their group stage matches in all of these venues. They never played at home in the knockout stages, as they were in Belo Horizonte, Curitiba, and Uberlândia at the time.
